Trafficking in children

A criminal act calling for a child protection response

Voksenåsen Hotel, Oslo
20–21 June 2011

Children's vulnerability to trafficking is recognised in the Baltic Sea Region. National Contact Points for unaccompanied and trafficked children are functional in almost all countries in the region and police and law enforcement regularly investigate on suspected cases of child trafficking. Legislation has moved forward so as to protect child victims and prosecute those exploiting them.

Ensuring a high level of preventive actions will necessitate further use of knowledge from all actors meeting with children.

This conference is organised as a part of the Norwegian presidency to the Council of the Baltic Sea States. Fight against trafficking in human beings is one of the priorities of the presidency and the Norwegian Ministry of Children, Equality and Social Inclusion is proud to invite to this conference in cooperation with the Expert Group for Cooperation on Children at Risk, EGCC. The EGCC has been responsible for the organisation and the content of the conference.

Vince Dean

Operational Tactical Adviser, UK Human Trafficking Centre

Vince Dean is an Operational Tactical Adviser for the UK Human Trafficking Centre, having joined it in March 2009. The centre is now part of the Serious Organised Crime Agency (SOCA) and is, amongst its other roles, the UK central repository for all intelligence involving human trafficking in the UK.

Vince was previously a senior Manager within SOCA, where, as a Branch Commander for its Trent Enforcement Branch, he lead and oversaw over fifteen investigations into national and international organised immigration crime and human trafficking.

Prior to SOCA, Vince spent 30 years in West Midlands Police and the National Crime Squad (NCS), attaining the rank of Detective Chief Inspector. Roles included Senior Investigating Officer of investigations into murder, international drugs trafficking as well as kidnap and extortion and firearms investigations. Latterly, he played a key management role in the creation of a multi-agency investigation team within the NCS, set up to exclusively tackle international organised immigration crime, focusing on human trafficking.

In his current role he engages regularly with law enforcement and other agencies tasked with investigating cases of human trafficking, nationally and internationally. Victims in these cases involve both migrants to the UK and UK nationals.

Christina Voigt

Senior Public Prosecutor, International Public Prosecution Office

My name is Christina Voigt. I have worked as a Public Prosecutor for about 20 years. For the last eight years I have worked mostly with domestic violence; that is women -and child abuses, rapes and other sexual crimes against woman and children and crimes within the family like murders and threats. That includes the problem with different cultures and honour crimes. I have a great deal of interest in this kind of crimes and I have always felt that I, as a prosecutor, can make a difference. One and half year ago I felt that I can't get stuck with this kind of crimes the rest of my life and I got an opportunity to work in the International Public Prosecution Office. I now handle organized crimes over the borders, that is mostly drugs and trafficking. One big difference between my former work and the work in the international prosecution office is that in my former work I could only start a prosecution when I was convinced that I would get a verdict of guilty in court. Now I can also start a case when the judicial interpretation is not clear in an important question, when we need new legal cases to guide the future application of the law. The importance is not if someone is guilty or not, the importance is that the reasoning in support of the judgment is of high quality. This is a small part of my work but, nevertheless, a very exciting part. I really love my work and think the best part is when I am in court. Everything can happen. And that is a challenge I can't resist.

The Expert Group for Cooperation on Children at Risk

The Expert Group for Cooperation on Children at Risk, EGCC, is a group of senior officials from the ministries responsible for children's issues in the member countries to the CBSS and the European Commission.

Member countries are: Denmark, Estonia, Finland, Germany, Iceland, Latvia, Lithuania, Norway, Poland, Russia and Sweden.

The EGCC identifies, supports and implements cooperation on children at risk between countries and organisations in the region. It also examines and reviews areas of concern with regard to children, as identified by its network of National Coordinators and experts. Based on these findings the EGCC adopts programmes and implements actions within areas of concern. Activities and programmes are carried out together with national authorities, agencies and organisations in cooperation with regional and international organisations.

Prioritised areas for the EGCC are:

- The protection of children from all forms of sexual exploitation
 - Unaccompanied and trafficked children
 - Children abused by being offered money or other forms of remuneration in exchange for sex
 - Children and online sexual exploitation
- The protection of children from all forms of sexual abuse and sexual violence
- The rights of children in institutions and in other forms of out of home care
