

Violence against women

Our response

Violence against women

Our response

Violence against women is a crime and a violation of fundamental human rights. It cuts across all levels of society in every European country, at huge social and financial cost.

According to the European Union Agency for Fundamental Rights, an estimated 13 million women in the EU have experienced physical violence within the previous year, while some 3.7 million women have experienced sexual violence. One in twenty women over the age of 15 has been raped.

The people of Norway, Iceland and Liechtenstein are committed to support joint and coordinated efforts to prevent and combat all forms of violence against women and girls.

Through the EEA and Norway Grants we assist our beneficiary countries in Central and Southern Europe in improving the lives of victims subjected to violence simply because of their gender and preventing it from happening.

We have made close to €25 million available until 2016 supporting programmes and projects ranging from shelters and counselling services to awareness raising and judicial reform.

We draw on the expertise of the Council of Europe and on the legally binding standards in the Council of Europe's Istanbul Convention in closing the gap and raising the bar in the protection of women's rights in Europe.

Bulgaria

In Bulgaria, Norway strengthens victim support. Measures range from improvements in the legal framework to the establishment of support services.

Programme: Domestic and Gender-based Violence

Results:

- Improved support services for 1 100 victims of domestic violence
- The establishment of a women’s shelter or crisis centre
- A research study on gender-based violence in Bulgaria
- Five information campaigns to help change public perceptions on gender-based violence
- Five information activities on domestic violence to be carried out in areas predominantly populated by Roma

Project example

The Bulgarian Ministry of Justice, working with the Council of Europe (CoE) will help to bring the Bulgarian legal framework in line with CoE standards. “Improvement of national legal framework” also includes strengthening the capacity of law enforcement authorities and social workers through the training of 550 professionals. The project receives €200 000 in support from Norway.

Cyprus

The construction of a new shelter will more than double the existing shelter capacity for victims of domestic abuse in Cyprus.

Project example

The Association for the Prevention and Handling of Violence in the Family implements the project “Shelter for Victims of Domestic Violence.” Cyprus’ first purpose-built shelter will accommodate up to 24 women and children experiencing abuse. A crisis centre will be established in the same building, providing specialised services for both women and men, including counselling services and psychological support. Seventy people are trained to provide support services for adults and children, and the shelter will reach out to both the Greek Cypriot and the Turkish Cypriot communities. The Norwegian Secretariat of the Shelter Movement is involved as a partner, providing advice and guidance based on its extensive experience in victim support services in Norway. The project, receives €742 920 in support from Norway.

Czech Republic

In the Czech Republic Norway is funding two programmes tackling domestic and gender-based violence. The NGO programme also funds smaller-scale initiatives within this field.

Programme: Let's Give (Wo)men a Chance!

Results:

- 40 new or broadened support services for victims, including telephone hotlines, crisis and advice centres
- 15 new research studies on domestic violence
- Training modules for schools to raise awareness
- Creation of partnerships and strengthened cooperation between relevant stakeholders in tackling gender-based violence
- Treatment and counselling programmes for offenders

Project examples

The project “Men against Violence towards Women and Children” will work with abusers, and implement methods of therapy not previously used in the Czech Republic. The project is implemented by the organisation League of Open Man, and the Norwegian Resource Centre for Men (Reform) is a partner. The project receives €62 802 in support from Norway.

Though helplines for victims of abuse in the Czech Republic exist, they are currently chargeable. Through “Helpline for victims of (domestic) violence” the organisation White Circle for Safety will provide the first free-of-charge helpline in the Czech Republic. The project receives €461 890 in support from Norway.

Estonia

Raising awareness, improving quality of support services and funding much-needed research in the field are among the supported activities in Estonia.

Programme: Domestic and Gender-based Violence

Results:

- Improving support services for 170 victims of violence yearly
- Raising awareness about domestic violence among the general public
- Increasing the efficiency of law enforcement authorities to respond to cases of domestic violence, and offer support to victims through training of 150 professionals

The Norwegian Directorate of Health is a partner in the programme.

Project examples

The project “Building a Uniform System for the Prevention of Intimate Partner Violence” focuses on developing a uniform system to prevent violence from partner or spouse in Estonia, through demonstrating the financial cost of violence from partner or spouse, integrating all parties dealing with violence, and awareness-raising among the risk groups, general public, specialists and legislators. The project is implemented by the Estonia Institute for Open Society Research, in cooperation with the Resource Centre on Violence, Traumatic Stress and Suicide Prevention, Western Norway (RVTS Vest), and receives €260 000 in support from Norway.

The NGO Eluliin in Tallinn is improving services for victims of trafficking. Self-help groups have been established, as has a support programme for victims who have children. The services at a shelter in the municipality of Atoll and a rehabilitation centre in Vega are improved through the project. “Supporting victims of trafficking” also includes research on the needs of victims and training for specialists. The project receives €278 188 in support from Norway.

By operating a free around the clock countrywide helpline and providing easy-to-understand information on how to access psychological and legal support, the Estonian Women’s Shelters Union is working to improve victim support services. The project, which receives €908 510 in support from Norway, also gives the Union the possibility to hire more people and provide better services.

The NGO Living for Tomorrow from Tallinn is working with the Norwegian Secretariat for the Shelter Movement to prevent trafficking and supporting victims by developing further anti-trafficking hotline services.

The project includes helping at least 2 500 persons via the trafficking hotline service, directing victims to shelter and rehabilitation services. “Human trafficking prevention and victim support also includes raising awareness of trafficking among Estonian youth. The project receives €170 000 in support from Norway.
